

ABSTRACT

A method and device for coating stents by uniformly encapsulating the struts of the stent. The stent is not contacted by the applicator, and the coating material is allowed to flow around the stent strut for full encapsulation, even when application of coating material occurs on only one surface of the stent.